Teach 'Hard Facts' About Reds: Dulles

Allen W. Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Wednesday urged the nation's high school principals to find a place in their crowded curricula for teaching young Americans the "hard facts" of communism.

Dulles addressed a closing session of the meeting of the National Assn. of Secondary School Principals at the Conrad Hilton.

"WITHOUT using McCarthyite tactics, without name calling or spook hunting, but by education in the hard facts of communism's past history and of its present subversive and perversive tactics," he said, "we should prepare an understanding and alerted nation to do its part to contain and eventually to confound" communism.

Such education, he said, "cannot safely be deferred until college or graduate school as now is too often the case."
